Part 2 - Writing Your Elevator Pitch

As you begin to prepare your elevator pitch, read below and answer the following questions. Your goal is to gain your instructor's approval and support of your team in order for you to move forward to the other projects in this simulation.

Your elevator pitch must include the following:

- A hook statement to grab the attention of your audience.
- Who your team is.
- Why your team is unique.
- What personal characteristics you possess to continue on in the competition.
- Why you are writing the elevator pitch.

1. Choose three adjectives that best describe your team:
2. In one sentence, develop a hook for your elevator pitch. This hook sentence will be used in the first paragraph of your elevator pitch, and your objective is to engage your listener and make them want to hear more. Using the adjectives that you listed in question 1, pose a question that starts with an interesting phrase, such as:
"Have you ever imagined a (type of team you chose) team that was (adjective 1), (adjective 2) and (adjective 3)?"
or
"Can you picture a (type of team you chose) team that is (adjective 1), (adjective 2) and (adjective 3)?"
or
"Picture a (type of team you chose) team that is (adjective 1), (adjective 2) and (adjective 3)."
or
"Ever wonder what a (type of team you chose) team that was (adjective 1), (adjective 2) and (adjective 3) would be like?"
3. In two to three sentences, discuss three reasons why you selected this sport and team name for your dream team. This will become the second paragraph of the body of your elevator pitch.
4. List three of your own personal characteristics that explain why you should be allowed to continue on in the competition, i.e., leadership qualities, organizational skills, die-hard fan, ability to communicate well, strong attention to detail, hard worker, creative, etc.
5. In two to three sentences, write your call to action asking your instructor for approval and support. State that you would like your instructor to approve your ideas for this team. Include your own personal characteristics that explain why you should be allowed to continue on in the competition. This will become the final paragraph of your elevator pitch.
